The Financial Clarity Report

Your Report Overview

Our scorecard technology has measured your current Financial Clarity across the below 4 key areas which underpin the long-term financial prosperity for most of the population:

Income Generation

How you earn your income and the attitudes you hold towards the management of it.

Investments & Assets

The ways in which you actively allocate funds throughout your personal finances.

Tax Planning & Minimisation

Your current circumstances from a strategic tax planning and optimisation perspective.

Security & Retirement Planning

The overall picture around your long-term financial plan and its impact on retirement.

Financially stressed people are more likely to face physical and mental health challenges.

How you scored

Financial clarity is measured by how you earn, manage, distribute, and protect money. This scorecard looks specifically at income, investments/assets, tax and long-term financial planning to gauge your financial clarity.

In your custom report to follow, we're going to show you how to address any concerns you may have surrounding your finances and guide you to take the consistent, little actions, which over time build considerable wealth.

An invitation for you

Overall Score

40%

Here's your overall Financial Clarity score

The total score above is a combined score based on how you answered questions across the 4 categories.

How you did overall paints a picture of your understanding and application of best practices across how you earn your income, manage and invest it, efficiently prepare your tax and how you plan for the future.

You highest scoring category was: Security & Retirement Planning and your lowest scoring category was: Investments & Assets.

Category 1: Income Generation

Your income generation score was 27%

Income is undoubtedly a crucial component of building your wealth, but it isn't necessarily the sole determining factor. While it's true that having a higher income provides you with a stronger capacity to allocate funds towards growing your wealth, it doesn't always guarantee financial success. In the UK, there are households with a combined income exceeding £100,000 per annum, yet they may not effectively allocate these funds to secure their financial future. Conversely, there are also households in the UK with a combined income of less than £100,000 per annum who successfully plan for a comfortable and enjoyable retirement.

| Key point to consider:

Always remember, wealth is built by compounding little steps made consistently, rarely by taking large quantum leaps.

4 fast ways to instantly strengthen your income score:

One: Cut expenditure

A rapid, surefire way to protect income is to minimise unnecessary outgoings. Brits collectively spend billions of pounds annually not only on things they don't need but things that they don't even realise. Between those little discretionary purchases to the lesser used entertainment apps, hunt for cuttable costs.

Two: Explore your worth

You may be undervaluing yourself in your professional life without even realising it. By recognising and harnessing your true worth, you may be able to uncover opportunities for higher income.

Three: Pitch your worth

If you discover that you in fact could and should be earning more based on your role and seniority, pitch that worth to relevant decision makers. If you're an entrepreneur then the good news is earning more is theoretically even easier – it's about focusing on marketing, sales and leverage.

Four: Allocate funds better

As you gradually earn more, get wise on how you allocate it – fight the urge to spend it because that's a typical symptom for many when extra cash shows up. Wealth is about earning, saving with discipline and investing with patience.

The value of an investment with St. James's Place will be directly linked to the performance of the funds you select and the value can therefore go down as well as up. You may get back less than you invested.

Category 2: Investments & Assets

Your investment and assets score was 78%

Whilst income is a vital piece to building wealth, how income is invested is just as important. Cash, as you know, is a depreciating asset. Even the highest interest savings accounts are unlikely to fuel your retirement.

So whilst building cash reserves for savings and so forth is important, sitting on too much cash itself does not provide the potential to be as impactful as tactfully investing it. Often, people don't realise that they are in fact sitting on a cash position that is beyond what they need. They may find that X amount of years down the track that capital invested appropriately would have produced a far higher return for them if placed elsewhere that isn't impacted as directly by things such as inflation – which cash, of course, is.

To measure your score here, we looked at your investing knowledge, what your investment plans look like and whether they're currently working for you. Enjoying your later years in life is in large part due to the assets you can accumulate and ultimately liquidate come the right time. To do this it takes years of discipline where consistent, inch-by-inch progress over the course of a career matters over anything else. The worst thing anyone can do is try to make a panicked sprint right at the end as retirement draws nearer.

Boosting your investment smarts

Take these steps to strengthen your financial clarity when around investing and asset accumulation:

One: Talk about money

Have conversations with people in your life who are directly impactful to or impacted by your financial circumstances – i.e your spouse, commercial partners, peers and even your children.

Two: Figure out your questions

The more money conversations become a focal point for you, the more your key questions around finances will start to pop up and inform where your knowledge gaps are that could help you excel sooner.

Three: Seek expert advice

Bring your money questions and heightened awareness to an expert who can go through them all with you and guide your decisions.

The value of an investment with St. James's Place will be directly linked to the performance of the funds you select and the value can therefore go down as well as up. You may get back less than you invested. An investment in equities does not provide the security of capital associated with a deposit account with a bank or building society.

Category 3: Tax Planning & Minimisation

Your total tax minimisation score was 60%

Tax and your obligations to HMRC can create unfortunate surprises for some and pleasant, completely legal financial wins for others. Just because you may be in a higher tax bracket or have significant estate, doesn't mean that you necessarily need to forfeit as much as you think.

In this category, scoring as highly as possible is most desired as it can mean minimising liabilities and retaining value for yourself and your family.

If you are in a high tax bracket, and have an investment portfolio, being up to date and compliant with your tax planning could be worth significant sums of money to you both now and in the longer term.

The wealth you build over the course of your life, fully deserves to be enjoyed by you and your family to the fullest. The right advice here is worth the weight of all the comfort and freedom you deserve in your golden years.

Tax is one of those things that's quite easy to get wrong, but with the right help from the right advisors, it can make a world of difference to your wealth and the legacy you leave one day.

Two basic yet overlooked factors that can keep your tax liabilities lower

One: Know your tax-free allowances

Don't simply assume you know what your tax-free allowances are, get expert advice based on your unique circumstances. You might qualify for significant relief based on various factors.

Two: Property loopholes

You don't have to be a House in Multiple Occupation (HMO) landlord to earn money through property or benefit from tax relief. If you simply rent a room in your home you could be eligible for a £7,500 tax exemption.

The levels and bases of taxation and relief from taxation can change at any time. The value of any tax relief depends on individual circumstances.

Category 4: Security & Retirement

Your security and retirement planning score was 0%

Last but certainly not least in terms of importance, we come to how ready you are for your later years – the time in which you'll be ready to slow down, begin enjoying life and soaking up the benefits of a successful career.

The challenge is that many of us start thinking about our retirement planning too late in life and the longer you leave it, the more challenging this becomes and the more pressure it can bring. There's a lot of pain here that can be avoided with some simple, early strategising.

This category is important to do well in advance and have forward-facing momentum throughout because it'll determine quality of life and financial safety in the years where our income typically slows down the most. Simply relying on an inheritance for example is not a solid wealth strategy.

In life, and particularly when it comes to finances, we need to be our own leaders and proactively set about establishing solid foundations and surefire safety nets to support us later in life when things like health become less predictable or inflation devalues our nest egg.

Taking control of your financial future

All this talk of retirement can be daunting, but whether it's 5... 10 or 20 years away for you, staying well informed is advisable. Consider this quick triage guide to ensure you're well prepared in advance:

One: Don't panic

Don't dwell on what you don't have or haven't done, instead make a decision to take control of this important area to your finances ASAP.

Two: Focus on yourself

Avoid the temptation of looking at others to see what they've done which you haven't. Now's the time to focus on you and get clear on your next steps.

Three: Take action soon

Commit to taking appropriate action to get this area of your finances into alignment with your goals – even if that means asking for help.

Let's get there together

We make it our purpose to ensure that your money is our worry, not yours.

When the time comes to wind down and focus on the finer things in life, your finances shouldn't be the determining factor in how you lead that lifestyle. Thanks to the insights we've learned from the information in your assessment, we have been able to build a useful profile that can assist us to assist you to make money the least of your worries going forward. Take us up on a no-obligation consultation and we can talk you through what we've seen from your results and what you should be doing next to safeguard the financial futures of both yourself and your family.
